

STATE OF MARYLAND

2015 NOV -4 P 12:18

IN THE
CIRCUIT COURT FOR BALTIMORE CITY

v.

CRIMINAL DIVISION

ALICIA WHITE

CASE No. 115141036

* * * * *

STATE'S RESPONSE TO DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO DISMISS FOR FAILURE TO CHARGE A CRIME

Now comes the State of Maryland, by and through Marilyn J. Mosby, the State's Attorney for Baltimore City; Michael Schatzow, Chief Deputy State's Attorney for Baltimore City; Janice L. Bledsoe, Deputy State's Attorney for Baltimore City; and Matthew Pillion, Assistant State's Attorney for Baltimore City; and responds herein to the Defendant's Motion to Dismiss for Failure to Charge a Crime.¹ The State requests that the Court deny the Motion because (1) procedurally, it exceeds the permissible boundaries of this type of pre-trial motion to dismiss; and (2) substantively, it rests on an inaccurate factual portrayal of the conduct charged and relies on both an incorrect assessment of Maryland law and an invalid comparison to distinguishable federal precedents.

I. The Defendant's motion exceeds the boundaries of the procedure on which it seeks relief

The Defendant's Motion comes down to one argument: the Second Count of the Indictment fails to charge the crime of second degree assault (in its reckless battery modality) because purportedly a police officer's failure to seatbelt a prisoner during custodial transportation does not constitute an act that can ever legally amount to criminal negligence, regardless of any resulting harm to the prisoner. Putting aside that the Defendant premises the Motion on an inaccurate assessment of the facts that the State has actually alleged (see Part II.A below), this argument asks the Court to exceed the inquisitional boundaries that Rule 4-252(d) permits during a pretrial motion to dismiss for failure to charge a crime.

¹ The Defendant's Motion avers that it incorporates by reference Defendant Miller's, Nero's, and Rice's Motions to dismiss the reckless endangerment counts, as well as their Replies to the State's Responses to those Motions. Accordingly, portions of this Response repeat and apply arguments made in the State's Responses to those other Motions; however, this Response differs somewhat, particularly in Sections II.A. and II.B., and addresses throughout each Section the rebuttal arguments raised in the reckless endangerment Replies, which this Defendant has now incorporated into her original Motion to dismiss the second degree assault count.

The Court of Appeals in State v. Taylor, 371 Md. 617, 645 (2002), explained that “[a] motion to dismiss the charges in an indictment or criminal information [pursuant to Rule 4-252(d)] is not directed to the sufficiency of the evidence, i.e., the quality or quantity of the evidence that the State may produce at trial, but instead tests the legal sufficiency of the indictment on its face.” Such a motion “may not be predicated on insufficiency of the State's evidence because such an analysis necessarily requires consideration of the general issue,” and “where there are factual issues involved, a motion to dismiss on the grounds that the State's proof would fail is improper.” Id. Whereas “[i]n a civil case, the trial court is permitted, in its discretion, to treat a motion to dismiss as a motion for summary judgment,” “[t]here is simply no such analogue in criminal cases.” Id. at 645-46. Accordingly, at this stage the only relevant question asks whether the Defendant has been informed of the State’s second degree assault allegation by an indictment and bill of particulars “characterizing the crime” and “so describing it as to inform the accused of the specific conduct with which she is charged.” Dzikowski v. State, 436 Md. 430, 445 (2013).

In this case, the Grand Jury’s indictment alleged that the Defendant “did assault Freddie Carlos Gray, Jr. in the second degree” on April 12, 2015. The State also supplied the Defendant, as requested, with a Bill of Particulars informing her that the specific conduct to which this charge refers occurred when she

